

Keeping Station

The red Bishop (now ret'd.)
proposed to several congregations

a new and active strategy for hope and creation

in the 1990's.
He called it

“Communities of Endurance.”
He meant (I think) that people who keep their hearts in times of frenzy

are likely to feel themselves outcasts - a debilitating experience the human race cannot afford.

The keeping station,

the holding on,
goes better when you're not alone.
